Roger's working life has been heavily involved in the mining industry, both nationally and internationally. For the first ten years of his career, he worked in both an engineering and management capacity, in open cut and underground metalliferous mines. For the last 30 years Roger has been a Health and Safety consultant and expert witness.

Training has been provided to all levels of management, medical staff and the workforce in the following industry sectors:

- Construction
- Mining
- Agricultural
- Forestry
- Fishing
- Manufacturing
- Health

Training has covered the following subjects:

- Values based OH&S activity
- Damaging Energy Concepts
- Predictive techniques for serious personal damage
- Problem solving methodologies
- The size and nature of the OH&S problem
- Incident investigation
- Ergonomics, human factors and perceptions
- Personal Damage arising from manual tasks, falls of people, vehicles, machinery, electricity, chemicals, etc.

Occupational Health and Safety auditing of major mining and construction facilities has been a regular aspect of Roger's work. Several thousand incidents involving fatal and non-fatal permanent damage have been investigated over 30 years for both industry and the legal profession (nationally and internationally). A multicultural perspective has been obtained due to work in Australia, New Zealand, Europe, Asia, North and South America and Africa.
